HOUSE PUTS OFF VOTE ON HEALTH CARE PLAN

1 President Donald Trump failed on Thursday to convince enough skeptical members of his own Republican Party to begin dismantling Obamacare, forcing the House of Representatives to delay a vote on the health care legislation. The day was designed to be a big symbolic win for conservatives, with Trump and House Republican leaders planning the vote on the seventh anniversary of former Democratic President

Barack Obama signing his namesake healthc are law, formally known as the Affordable Care Act, which became a favored target of Republicans. Instead, the vote was postponed indefinitely, dealing a setback to Trump in what he hoped would be his first legislative victory. REUTERS

SENATE REPEALS BROADBAND PRIVACY RULES

2 The U.S. Senate voted narrowly to repeal regulations requiring internet service providers to do more to protect customers' privacy than websites like Alphabet Inc.'s Google or Facebook Inc. The vote was along party lines, with 50 Republicans approving the measure and 48 Democrats rejecting it. The two remaining Republicans in the Senate were absent and did not cast a vote. According to the rules approved by the Federal Communications Commission in October under then-President Barack Obama, internet providers would need to obtain consumer consent before using precise geolocation, financial information, health information, children's information and web browsing history for advertising and internal marketing. GENERAL: RUSSIA MAY BE HELPING SUPPLY TALIBAN

3 The top U.S. general in Europe said that he had seen Russian influence on Afghan Taliban insurgents growing and raised the possibility that Moscow was helping supply the militants, whose reach is expanding in southern Afghanistan. "I've seen the influence of Russia of late — increased influence in terms of association and perhaps even supply to the Taliban," Army General Curtis

Scaparrotti, who is also NATO's Supreme Allied Commander, Europe, told a Senate Armed Services Committee hearing. He did not elaborate on what kinds of supplies might be headed to the Taliban or how direct Russia's role might be. REUTERS

NUNES APOLOGIZES OVER SURVEILLANCE CLAIM

4 The Republican head of the U.S. House of Representatives Intelligence Committee apologized for the way he handled sensitive allegations about U.S. spy agency surveillance of President Donald Trump's team. Representative Devin Nunes was criticized by colleagues on Wednesday for calling a news conference to announce that the communications of members of the team that ran Trump's transition to the presidency were swept up in incidental surveillance targeting foreigners. Democrats were upset that Nunes made the comments to the media and then briefed Trump in the White House without informing them. They questioned whether the intelligence panel could run a credible investigation. A Republican intelligence committee aide said on Thursday that Nunes had apologized to Democrats on the panel. Harlem apartment complex leaves thousands without gas service since November

Repairs are progressing at a "turtle's pace," residents say.

AMANDA MIKELBERG

Riverside Park Apartments at 3333 Broadway AMANDA MIKELBERG

Residents at a mammoth West Harlem apartment complex have suffered through a Dickensian winter.

Tenants in about 1,200 apartments at 3333 Broadway weren't able to boil water on their stoves, let alone bake a Christmas ham.

Some living at Riverside Park Community even went without heat and hot water intermittently during the four months their gas has been, and still is, off.

The shut-down followed a resident's Nov. 28 complaint about an odor of gas emanating from a utility room. That led to the discovery of a gas leak. To avert catastrophe, every gas line in the five-tower complex had to be closed as the complex goes through a complicated process of repair and inspection.

Residents from buildings A through E are fuming as the company that owns the building, Urban American, has provided scant information about the issue and relatively nothing about when to expect service to be restored.

"It's one nightmare after another," one tenant told Metro. "It's clear it's moving at a turtle's pace."

People from the management company defended the massive challenge.

"Not even God made it happen in one day," assistant building manager Hansel Olivares told Metro. "We're going as fast as we can."

Cooking for five people on a portable electric stove has been a tough task for Mery Mendoza, who's lived at Riverside Park for 26 years. Her electric bill skyrocketed to $250 a month — owing to the electric cooker.

Lesley Cordero, 22, moved into her studio in January, not knowing that she wouldn't be able to cook. And the $90 discount offered on her $1,795 rent has barely covered her dining-out expenses, she said.

Even the clothes dryers were cold until about a month ago.

Restoring the gas is a lengthy, complex process, a representative for the city's Department of Buildings explained. The building owners must hire a licensed master plumber to do initial inspections, file permits and make repairs.

Zone by zone, as repairs are made, the plumber requests the DOB to do an inspection to authorize service restoration. Finally, the utility company, in this case Con Edison, will do final "integrity tests" before turning the gas back on.

"Access to the apartments has made pressure testing difficult," Con Edison rep Sydney Alvarez said. "The plumbers expect repairs to take weeks. They have to have access to every single apartment, and that can be time-consuming."

As of March 23, service to 334 apartments had been restored. Another 856 still do not have gas. The DOB indicated that they have granted the authorization each time they've come out for inspection, the last time occurring on March 9.

It could take a few more months for gas to be fully operational systemwide, Olivares said. Additional calls to the legal department at Urban American went unanswered by press time.

"If there is a good note in this, it's that someone took the initiative to call about the gas leak," adding that people must speak up — call 911 — if they smell the signature rotten egg smell of the chemical added to gas for safety.

COMBINED EARLY NOTICE OF A PROPOSED ACTIVITY IN A 100-YEAR FLOODPLAIN AND WETLAND, NOTICE OF COMPLETION OF DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STATEMENT, NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY OF DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STATEMENT, and ANNOUNCEMENT OF PUBLIC HEARING

Coastal and Social Resiliency Initiatives for Tottenville Shoreline
Staten Island, New York

March 24, 2017

Name of Responsible Entity and Recipient: New York State Homes and Community Renewal (HCR), 99 Washington Avenue, Suite 1224, Albany, New York 12260, in cooperation with the New York State Housing Trust Fund Corporation (HTFC), of the same address.

Certifying Officer: Daniel Greene, General Counsel, New York State Governor's Office of Storm Recovery, 25 Beaver Street, 5th Floor, New York, New York 10004.

Pursuant to 24 CFR Section 58.59 and 24 CFR part 55 as well as 6 NYCRR 617.12, this combined Early Notice of a Proposed Activity in a 100-year Floodplain and Wetland, Notice of Availability of Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS), and Announcement of Public Hearing satisfies three separate procedural requirements for project activities proposed to be undertaken by HCR.

Project Description: The Governor's Office of Storm Recovery (GOSR), an office of HCR's HTFC, is responsible for the direct administration of the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Community Development Block Grant – Disaster Recovery (CDBG-DR) program in New York State. GOSR proposes to provide $69,000,000.00 in CDBG-DR funding to implement the Coastal and Social Resiliency Initiatives for Tottenville Shoreline (therein after, the "Proposed Activity") located along the south shore of Staten Island and parallel that shoreline within the Raritan Bay. The Proposed Activity will occur in the City of New York, borough of Staten Island, on public lands owned by the City of New York on-shore and underwater lands owned by the State of New York off-shore. The Proposed Activity consists of two projects, the Rebuilding by Design (RBD) Living Breakwaters Project and Tottenville Shoreline Protection Project. The proposed RBD Living Breakwaters Project includes [1] a system of off-shore engineered breakwaters designed to reduce wave energy at the shoreline, and prevent or reverse shoreline erosion while creating hard/structured marine habitat; (2) an on-shore community Water Hub that would provide a place for access to the waterfront, orientation, education, information on shoreline resiliency, community gathering space and other programming; (3) strategic placement of sand for restoration along the shoreline; and (4) a seasonal floating dock on the breakwater and a boat launch along the shoreline to be used for observations, monitoring, maintenance and stewardship, including specifically, for vessels operated by the Billion Oyster Project and any other anticipated project stewards. The proposed Tottenville Shoreline Protection Project would involve a system of shoreline protection measures working to attenuate waves, limit erosion and mitigate against coastal flooding and would be comprised of (1) an earthen berm; (2) a hybrid dune system; (3) an eco-revetment; (4) a raised edge; and (5) a trail system adjacent to the shoreline.

Persons desiring to be heard on environmental issues will be afforded the opportunity to be heard.

Early Notice of a Proposed Activity in a 100-year Floodplain and Wetland
This is to give notice that the GOSR is conducting an evaluation of the Proposed Activity as required by Executive Order 11988 and Executive Order 11990 in accordance with HUD regulations (24 CFR Part 55). There are three primary purposes for this notice. First, to provide the public an opportunity to express their concerns and share information about the Proposed Activity, including alternative locations outside of the floodplain and wetland. Second, adequate public notice is an important public education tool. The dissemination of information about floodplains and wetlands facilitates and enhances governmental efforts to reduce the risks associated with the occupancy and modification of these special areas. Third, as a matter of fairness, when the government determines it will participate in actions taking place in floodplains or wetlands, it must inform those who may be put at greater or continued risk. Funding for the Proposed Activity will be provided by the HUD CDBG-DR program for storm recovery activities in New York State.

The Proposed Activity is needed to address the vulnerability Staten Island's South Shore to both event-based and gradual coastal erosion and land loss. The Proposed Activity is intended to reduce wave action and coastal erosion along the shoreline in Tottenville, while enhancing ecosystems and shoreline access, use and stewardship.

The Proposed Activity will result in impacts to 4.6 acres of 100-Year Floodplain and 14.7 acres of National Wetland Inventory and/or New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) -mapped wetlands. These impacts will consist of approximately 4.6 acres of native coastal vegetation planted through the implementation of the Tottenville Shoreline Protection Project, which would enhance and increase habitat availability for coastal wildlife, and approximately 12.7 acres through the implementation of the RBD Living Breakwaters Project, which would create a minimum of 16.8 acres of useable habit below mean high water.

Floodplain maps based on the FEMA Flood Insurance Rate Maps and wetlands maps based on the National Wetland Inventory and DEC data have been prepared and are available for review with additional information at http://www.stormrecovery.ny.gov/environmental-docs

Completion and Availability of the DEIS
This is to give notice that a DEIS for the Proposed Activity has been completed in accordance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) and the HUD environmental review regulations at 24 CFR Part 58, as well as the New York State Environmental Quality Review Act (SEQRA) pursuant to 6 NYCRR 617. The DEIS for the Proposed Activity is available for public review and comment.

Public Review: Public viewing of the DEIS is available online at http://www.stormrecovery.ny.gov/environmental-docs and is also available in person Monday –Friday, 9:00 AM – 5:30PM at the following locations:

- Governor's Office of Storm Recovery: 25 Beaver Street, 5th Floor, New York, NY 10004. Contact: (844) 988-4747
- New York Public Library, Tottenville Branch: 7430 Amboy Rd, Staten Island, NY 10307. Contact: Information Desk (718) 984-0946

Further information may be requested by writing to the above address, emailing NYSCDBG_DR_ER@nyshcr.org or by calling (844) 988-4747. This combined notice is being sent to individuals and groups known to be interested in these activities, local news media, appropriate local, state and federal agencies, the regional office of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency having jurisdiction, and to the HUD Field Office, and is being published in a newspaper of general circulation in the affected community.

Public Comments: Any individual, group or agency may submit written comments on the Project. The public is hereby advised to specify in their comments which "notice" their comments address. Comments should be submitted via email, in the proper format, on or before May 8, 2017, at NYSCDBG_DR_ER@nyshcr.org. Written comments may also be submitted at the following address, or by mail, in the proper format, to be received on or before May 8, 2017: Governor's Office of Storm Recovery: 25 Beaver Street, 5th Floor, New York, NY 10004. Comments may be received by telephone by contacting the Governor's Office of Storm Recovery at (844) 988-7474. All comments must be received on or before 5pm on May 8, 2017, or they will not be considered. If modifications result from public comment, these will be made prior to proceeding with the expenditure of funds.

Announcement of Public Hearing
GOSR will hold a public hearing from 7:00 pm to 9:00 pm on April 26, 2017. The hearing location is Public School 6, 566 Page Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10307. The purpose of the public hearing is for GOSR to receive comments on the adequacy of the DEIS. GOSR will not respond to any of the comments or take action on the Proposed Activity at the hearing. Comments will be considered as part of the preparation of the Final EIS. The meeting facility is accessible to those with disabilities. Any individual who requires special accommodations, such as a sign language interpreter, accessible seating, documentation in alternative formats, is requested to contact the Governor's Office of

Jewish teen in Israel arrested in connection with global JCC threats

The teen's attorney says her client has a brain tumor, which "may affect his behavior.

A teenager with dual Israeli-U.S. citizenship was arrested in Israel on Thursday on suspicion of making dozens of hoax bomb threats against Jewish community centers in the United States, Australia and New Zealand.

The suspect, whose identity remains sealed pursuant to a court order, is 18 years old and Jewish, a police spokesman said.

The teenager's alleged motives were not immediately clear.

At a court hearing near Tel Aviv, the teen's defense attorney, Galit Bash, said the young man has a growth in his head that causes behavioral problems. She later told Reuters he has a brain tumor, which "may affect his behavior, his ability to understand right and wrong," and said the teen's father had also been held in connection with the case.

U.S. authorities have been investigating a surge of threats against Jewish organizations, including more than 100 bomb threats in separate waves over the past three months targeting Jewish community centers (JCCs) in dozens of states.

The threats prompted criticism of President Donald Trump for what some Jewish groups saw as an inadequate response from his administration. He condemned the incidents in a major speech to Congress in February.

Attorney General Jeff Sessions on Thursday said the arrest reflected the government's determination to prosecute those who perpetrate hate crimes.

Israeli police said the teenager is believed to be responsible for most of the threats, though the precise number was not immediately clear.

The suspect, who is accused of targeting centers in Australia and New Zealand as well as the United States, began making the calls in January using advanced masking technologies to hide his identity, police said.

Authorities also said he was responsible for a previous bomb threat against a Delta Airlines flight in January 2015 at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, which took part in the probe, confirmed the arrest but declined to offer further details.

The threats forced the evacuation of many JCCs, including some with daycare and school facilities for infants and young children. Coupled with other incidents such as the desecration of Jewish cemeteries, they have stoked fears of a resurgence in anti-Semitism in the United States.

The NYPD told Metro that it did not have any information on whether the teen was behind any of the threats made against JCCs in New York.

Metro web reporter Nikki Mascali contributed to this report.

"While the details of this crime remain unclear, the impact of this individual's actions is crystal clear: These were acts of anti-Semitism."

Obamacare supporters rally against congressional repeal efforts

Many talked about a very personal stake in the outcome of the health care debate roiling Capitol Hill.

Supporters of Obamacare staged rallies across the country on Thursday denouncing efforts by President Donald Trump and Republican congressional leaders to repeal the landmark law that has extended medical insurance coverage to some 20 million Americans.

Hundreds of demonstrators turned out in Washington, Chicago and Los Angeles marking the seventh anniversary of enactment of Obamacare, as the Affordable Care Act (ACA) has become widely known.

"I feel sick today, but I came here because I'm terrified," said Steve Martin, 27, an unemployed Los Angeles resident who was diagnosed with cancer a year ago. "The legislators have the best health care in the world, and we deserve the same."

The ACA, considered former Democratic President Barack Obama's premiere domestic achievement, has drawn unrelenting scorn from Republicans, with promises to repeal and replace a centerpiece of Trump's presidential campaign.

Thursday's rallies coincided with planned action in the House of Representatives on a Republican-backed bill to begin dismantling Obamacare, but the vote was indefinitely postponed as Republican leaders and the White House scrambled to muster enough votes for passage.

Many moderate Republicans as well as Democrats have raised concerns that repeal-and-replace would leave too many Americans without health coverage.

Supporters of the bill say it would lower premiums, but critics counter that those savings would in many cases be more than offset by higher co-pays and other out-of-pocket costs.

Obamacare backers also worry about the fate of millions who gained insurance under the bill's major expansion of Medicaid, the federal-state program providing coverage for the needy, the elderly and the disabled.

In the nation's capital, several hundred chanting protesters gathered at Freedom Plaza, a few blocks from the White House, carrying signs with slogans such as "We Fight Back" and "Keep America Healthy."

Robinette Barmer, 61, a former seamstress and caterer from Baltimore now on a disability pension, said that without Obamacare she could not afford the various medications she takes for ailments such as asthma and high blood pressure.

After the rally, protesters marched a block to the Trump International Hotel on Pennsylvania Avenue, where several dozen sprawled on the sidewalk in a "die-in" symbolizing the effect of rolling back Obamacare.

Protest organizers said smaller gatherings were held outside the congressional district offices of various Republican lawmakers around the country. REUTERS

UK parliament attacker named as British-born Khalid Masood

Berlin's landmark Brandenburg Gate

Islamic State claimed responsibility for the attack in a statement issued by its Amaq news agency, but did not name Masood and gave no details.

The attacker who killed three people near parliament in London before being shot dead was named on Thursday as a 52-year-old British-born man, Khalid Masood, who was once investigated by MI5 intelligence officers over concerns about violent extremism.

The death toll from Wednesday's attack on the heart of Britain's democracy grew to five as police said one of the injured, a 75-year-man, had died in hospital after his life support was withdrawn.

That number included Masood, 52, who was shot dead by police.

Police said Masood was born in the county of Kent in southeast England and was most recently living in the West Midlands region of central England.

"Masood was not the subject of any current investigations and there was no prior intelligence about his intent to mount a terrorist attack," the Metropolitan Police said in a statement.

"However, he was known to police and has a range of previous convictions for assaults, including GBH (grievous bodily harm), possession of offensive weapons and public order offences."

Prime Minister Theresa May told parliament the attacker had once been investigated by the MI5 intelligence agency over concerns about violent extremism, but had been a peripheral figure.

An armed police officer stands guard near Westminster Bridge and the Houses of Parliament on March 22, 2017, in London, England. ALL PHOTOS BY GETTY IMAGES

Police said Masood had never been convicted of a terrorist offense. His first conviction was in 1983 for criminal damage and his last one in December 2003 for possession of a knife.

During five minutes of mayhem in the heart of London on Wednesday, Masood sped across Westminster Bridge in a car, plowing into pedestrians. He then ran through the gates of the nearby parliamentary precinct and fatally stabbed an unarmed policeman before being shot dead.

Police arrested eight people at six locations in London and Birmingham in the investigation into the attack, which May said was inspired by a warped Islamist ideology. All were suspected of preparing terrorist acts, police later confirmed.

The Enterprise rental car company said the vehicle used had been rented from its Spring Hill branch in Birmingham, which is in the West Midlands.

About 40 people were injured, of whom 29 remained in hospital on Thursday evening, seven in critical condition. May visited some of the wounded, her spokesman said.

The bloodshed took place on the first anniversary of attacks that killed 32 people in Brussels, and resembled Islamic State-inspired attacks in France and Germany where vehicles were driven into crowds.

The dead were Masood, two members of the public, and Keith Palmer, the 48-year-old policeman stabbed by Masood.

"He will be deeply missed. We love him so much," Palmer's family said in a statement. He was married with a five-year-old daughter.

A minute's silence was held in parliament and outside police headquarters on Thursday morning. A police Twitter account said it had been held at 0933 GMT because 933 was the shoulder number on Palmer's uniform, but that tweet was later deleted and police released a different number.

As dusk fell, hundreds gathered in London's Trafalgar Square in a vigil to remember the victims. With traffic diverted away, volunteers handed out candles in an eerie silence. REUTERS

Here are three things I believe unequivocally: 1) My wife and dog like me even when I am a bonehead. Well, at least the dog. 2) Fried foods are an underappreciated cornerstone of civilization and must never be scorned. And 3) The truth matters.

I mention that last one because this week Time posted a big interview with President Trump in which that did not seem to be the case. Let me be more direct. It was like a discussion of reality in a sauna with Salvador Dali. Through a meandering series of stream-of-consciousness answers, the president painted truth as utterly subject to interpretation … or rather, his interpretation.

On his widely reported (and unproven) claims about wiretapping by the Obama administration, millions of fraudulent votes in the last election, and Ted Cruz's father sipping coffee with President Kennedy's assassin, Mr. Trump repeatedly refused to acknowledge any mistake, misstatement, half-truth or lie.

Instead, and oddly for a man who shouts "fake news" like "olé" at a bullfight, he defended and repeated several of his false claims by saying he read them in the paper. Or saw them online. Or heard them somewhere; as if a president would have no resources to, oh say, check those claims for accuracy. It's circular logic, of course, sort of like: I believe any jobs reports showing progress by my predecessor were fabricated because they didn't suit my needs. Now they do, so they must be real.

By the end I was recalling a great Steely Dan lyric: "Don't believe I'm taken in by stories I have heard, I just read the Daily News and swear by every word." But the words in this interview are hard to swear by because they are so filled with misdirection, falsehoods, and hints of falsehoods. President Trump most assuredly says things that are true. He can make valid points. He often cuts through the D.C. noise and nonsense better than most, and heaven knows this town could use more of that. But his seeming belief that he can freely spout rubbish; that "truth" is whatever he deems it to be is dangerous for the country — and for him. Because the truth trumps popes, potentates and yes — even presidents.

State Department to approve Keystone pipeline permit

The State Department will approve Friday the permit needed to proceed with construction of the Canada-to-United States Keystone XL oil pipeline, according to two government sources familiar with the process.

The move would mark the beginning of process that could be lengthy and complicated by approvals needed by state regulators and legal challenges.

The project was blocked by former President Barack Obama. But days after taking office in January, President Donald Trump, a Republican who supports Keystone, ordered its construction. That could mean that project, proposed in 2008, will eventually be completed.

White House spokesman Sean Spicer said the administration would provide an update on Keystone on Friday but did not offer any details.

One government source familiar with the process said Thursday the State Department was working to get the approval done before Monday, the end of the 60-day timeline under Trump's January executive order for the construction of Keystone and the Dakota Access pipelines.

The State Department's undersecretary for political affairs, Tom Shannon, is expected approve the cross-border permit for TransCanada Corp.'s pipeline since Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, the former CEO of ExxonMobil, recused himself from the matter.

The multibillion-dollar Keystone pipeline would bring more than 800,000 barrels per day of heavy crude from Canada's oil sands to U.S. refineries and ports along the Gulf of Mexico via an existing pipeline network in Nebraska.

Obama had rejected the pipeline, saying it would do nothing to reduce fuel prices for U.S. motorists and would contribute emissions linked to global warming.

TransCanada resubmitted its permit application after Trump's executive order. Spokesman Terry Cunha said the company was working closely with the State Department.

Conservatives said they supported quick approval. Nick Loris, an energy and environment researcher at the Heritage Foundation, said approval would "reestablish some certainty and sanity to a permitting process that was hijacked by political pandering." REUTERS

Police detective, three others victims identified in Wisconsin shooting

Authorities on Thursday identified four victims, including a veteran police officer, who were killed during a shooting spree in central Wisconsin sparked by a domestic violence incident.

Detective Jason Weiland, 40, of the Everest Metropolitan Police Department was killed Wednesday afternoon during a standoff with a 45-year-old male suspect who had already killed three civilians, the Wisconsin Department of Justice and local law enforcement said.

The other victims were identified as Dianne Look, 67, Karen Barclay, 62, and Sara Quirt Sann, 43.

The suspect, who was a resident of Weston, Wisconsin but has not been identified, was injured by police during a standoff at an apartment complex. He remains in a local hospital under police custody.

Sara Quirt Sann FACEBOOK

The killings stemmed from an unidentified domestic violence incident and the victim of the domestic violence was unharmed in the shooting spree, the Department of Justice said.

Authorities declined to provide further details on the shootings or when the domestic violence occurred, citing the ongoing investigation.

Police on Wednesday received a report of an active shooter in the town of Rothschild at around 1:30 p.m., the Department of Justice said.

The suspect visited the Marathon Savings Bank, killing Look and Barclay, who were both employees of the bank. He then went to a law office in nearby Schofield, Wisconsin where he killed Quirt Sann.

Police later converged on the apartment building in Weston, where Weiland was fatally shot while establishing a police perimeter, Marathon County Sheriff Scott Parks told members of the media at a news conference on Thursday. REUTERS

Jake Gyllenhaal and Rebecca Ferguson play astronauts on the International Space Station trying not to get killed by a rampaging alien. ALEX BAILEY

The star talks about his alien thriller, "Life," and how acting isn't that hard.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

Jake Gyllenhaal is drawn to a challenge. For "Southpaw," he transformed himself into a ripped, powerful boxer. In "Everest," he tackled mountain climbing. For "Life" — a sci-fi thriller/horror film about a crew of astronauts aboard the International Space Station who discover intelligent life, then discover it wants to kill them all — the actor had to spend the entire movie in zero gravity. It was all done with wires and, besides, he doesn't want you to think it was what you'd really call "hard work."

It's kind of weird seeing a movie where an international team is working together. The world seems to be moving towards isolationism right now.

The idea that everybody was from a different country, that everyone represented a different culture and they all had to coexist, was one of the most important factors for me. We didn't know what was going to happen to the world with the election when we shot it. So even though it's a fun movie and it's terrifying and thrilling, it's also wonderful to see the world coexist and fight this thing together.

We're going to need more movies about that as the world falls apart.

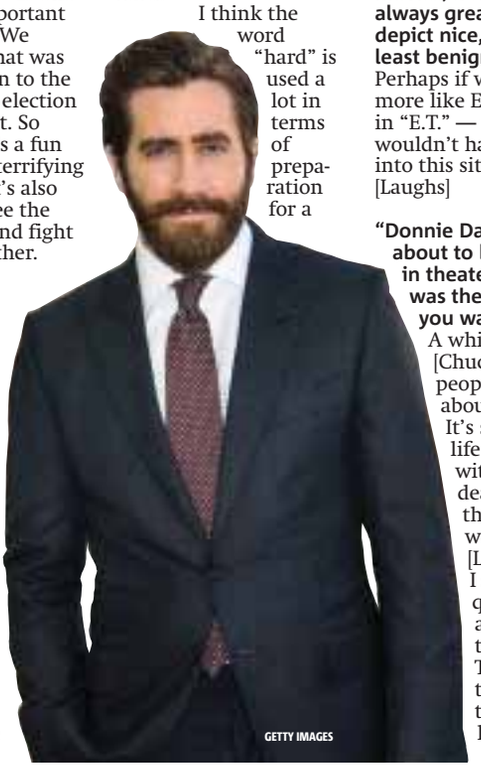
Absolutely.

You also have to spend most of the movie in zero gravity, which looks tricky.

I mean, people are always surprised when an actor can walk and act at the same time, or chew gum and act at the same time. It is odd hanging on wires and trying to have a sort of emotional scene. Every project offers up its own interesting conundrums. Hanging and acting was definitely one of them.

Sometimes I think moviegoers and journalists are too shocked by technical difficulties like that. Maybe it's not that hard.

I think the word "hard" is used a lot in terms of preparation for a movie. I don't believe that word should be used with anything having to do with filmmaking. There are trying times and things that make it difficult. But compared to so many other things going on in the world that are hard and difficult, it's not the right word to use.



GETTY IMAGES

This has an alien that turns out to be belligerent. They often are in movies, although it's always great when films depict nice, kind or at least benign aliens.

Perhaps if we responded more like Elliott did in "E.T." — maybe we wouldn't have gotten into this situation. [Laughs]

"Donnie Darko" is about to be reissued in theaters. When was the last time you watched that?

A while ago. [Chuckles] But people ask me about it often. It's still in my life. I still deal with it — not deal with it, that's the wrong word. [Laughs] But I still answer questions about it to this day. That's really a testament to the film. It's lasted.

Blinding you with science

Last month NASA located seven not previously discovered planets not terribly far away from our solar system. Did "Life" make you even more excited by that news?

I've always been interested in news like that. I think we all are. And that's pretty extraordinary news. I don't think it had anything to do with being involved with this or not. I did feel, probably falsely, that I knew a little bit more about it than I did before. But in truth, I most likely don't. [Laughs]

Rebecca Ferguson is one of the overqualified actors in the lean, mean, angry alien movie "Life." ALEX BAILEY

It features Ryan Reynolds and two of the writers of "Deadpool," but don't worry: "Life" is a straight-up, no-joke monster-in-space movie, not a self-impressed send-up. It's a high-end "Alien" knockoff, so polished and attractively cast that you might sometimes forget it has almost the same plot: A team of astronauts get pecked-off, one-by-one, by an extraterrestrial beastie. It's not a Gigerian freaka-zoid this time but a shape-shifter; at various points it looks like a turtle and eventually a squid floating after its prey for some inventive, R-rated kills.

It's here that we offer what may sound like a strange theory: Originality isn't always important. Sometimes it's just as worthwhile to be familiar, even derivative. "Life" arrives months ahead of "Alien: Covenant," which has the unenviable task of bridging one prequel ("Prometheus") with a classic ("Alien"), while clearing space for four more sequels. Classy budget and first-rate effects aside, "Life" is content to be a modest trifle. There are only six actors (including Reynolds as well as Jake Gyllenhaal and Rebecca Ferguson) and a simple mission: When the intelligent life they've found wants them dead, they must survive.

It's sad that the bar for movies is so low now that "may not have a sequel" feels like something special. You really watch "Life" just to see if it ever screws up. It does get sloppy toward the end, but on the whole it's cool and confidently made, most of it comprised of one problem-solving activity after another. In two years you'll confuse "Life" with such fellow "Alien" rip-offs as "Galaxy of Terror" and "Creature," but while it's in front, of you it's lean and mean. MP

"Saban's Power Rangers"

One minute you're gobbling up awards for playing LBJ on Broadway; the next you're bringing unneeded gravitas to words like "Zordon" and "Zeo Crystal." It's not clear why Bryan Cranston is in the awkwardly named "Saban's Power Rangers," a blockbusterification of a two-decades-old kiddie trash show. The acting god only appears in the flesh for about 30 seconds, then spends the rest of it as a big hologram thing on a cave wall, looking like he's pressing his face onto one of those pin art impression boards you get at Spencer's.

Yet even with all the Cranston, "Power Rangers" is not quite a gritty reboot, but also not quite sure what it is instead. It's a mash-up of approaches that don't go together. Our diverse quintet of high schoolers find an imprisoned magical being (Cranston) and his goofy talking robot (voice of Bill Hader). They instruct them that they can turn (or "morph") into a gaggle of loudly colored, spandex-wearing, high-kicking, dino-bot-riding defenders of Earth.

Still, it's hard to take even semiseriously a pricey romp where the villain is named Rita Repulsa. Played by Elizabeth Banks, she's some kind of alien witch who wants to destroy the planet for some reason. She's a hoot, but she's in a different movie than the Rangers. Each one is a YA brooder, while Cranston seems to think he's doing Shakespeare. By the time Repulsa is leveling a dead-end small town, you won't know what kind of film you're watching, or why it contains no less than Walter White. MP

Can you recommend a movie that, more or less objectively, isn't very good? That is spotty on laughs and sloppy when it comes to tone, story and especially when it tries to be an "action-comedy"? It would be easy to write off "CHiPs," a dirty, gross-out, thoroughly unnecessary reboot of a once-iconic '70s cop show no millennial knows ever existed. All you have to do is point to any number of failed gags and set pieces.

But "CHiPs" isn't a programmatic studio comedy giving us what it thinks audiences want. It gives us what its maker and co-star, Dax Shepard, wants to give us. It has almost nothing to do with the original program, beyond two strapping California Highway Patrolmen, suave Ponch (Michael Pena) and fearless/kinda dumb Jon Baker (Shepard), steering around on police cruisers. The plot is dumb — so dumb it could have been on an episode of "CHiPs": There's some crooked cops (led by Vincent D'Onofrio) ripping off armored trucks.

Sometimes "CHiPs," weirdly, plays things a little too straight, but in a way that winds up being endearing. As a comedy director, Shepard isn't always looking for a gag, and when he is he doesn't always give us what we expect. Even when it goes for the easy yuk, "CHiPs" doesn't hit it at the usual angle. Here's a movie with stupid gay panic jokes that include lengthy debates about homophobia. By the end it's more likeable than funny — about as likeable as Shepard himself, who's helmed a corporate cash-cow that feels like it was made by a human. MP

Kristen Bell explains 'boob job' in 'CHiPs'

It's not what you think.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

On the set of the buddy cop com "CHiPs," Kristen Bell and (real life) husband Dax Shepard had a minor disagreement — and it's kind of a funny story.

In the film, starring and directed by Shepard, Bell has a supporting role as his vapid, estranged ex-wife. "I wanted [my character] to be very stereotypical L.A., and I wanted her to have an aggressive boob job," explains the 36-year-old actress. To achieve that look, Bell, who was breastfeeding at the time, didn't pump for 24 hours. "I told the kids, 'the food truck is closed,'" jokes the mom of two.

In one revealing scene, Shepard wanted her to zip up her bathing suit a little bit, telling her she was "pulling focus" away from the dialogue with her cleavage. But Bell stood her ground, intent on "exploiting [herself]," she jokes. "I was like, 'Listen, if there's one time in my life I'm going to have big, nice boobs, it's when I'm breastfeeding — why not use 'em while you got 'em!'"

Kristen Bell has a small role in husband Dax Shepard's "CHiPs," out today. PETER IOVINO

Bickering aside, the "Frozen" star says she loved being on set with Shepard. She credits their strong relationship to couples therapy, which she says helped them work through some big issues. "We disagree on almost everything, and to make that work you just have to learn how to communicate effectively," she explains.

Bell has been outspoken about her own struggles with anxiety and depression — and fighting the stigma around mental health issues. "No good comes from anything when it's left in the dark. Seeking treatment is something that should be celebrated, not shamed," she explains.

GETTY

In addition to therapy, the L.A. resident has daily strategies to keep herself in balance, from meditating when she needs a break — "My anxiety is always boosted by multitasking," she says, (Kristen, same) — to working out. "Those endorphins are key to everything," says Bell. She loves to take long walks with her dog or go on a nearby hike, and is just getting into yoga, which she says she finds "very calming."

For Bell, an eco-conscious lifestyle goes hand in hand with healthy choices.

Ahead of Earth Day, Bell partnered with Tide purclean, a new 65 percent plant-based detergent, to introduce their new clean energy campaign. The brand encourages folks to take the #CleanPledge — vowing to adopt energy-saving methods and sharing the hashtag on social media — with $5 donated from every pledge to the World Wildlife Fund.

"As a mom I obviously need clean clothes, but I also care a lot about the environment I'm leaving my children," explains Bell, who has two daughters under 3. "The challenge is to get more households to be environmentally conscious when they're doing their laundry."

Bell is a firm believer that acts of service alleviate anxiety. "You can receive self-esteem by doing esteemable acts — so helping anyone around you, or helping conserve the environment, will make you feel better," she says. "It's basic math."

What's new at Citi Field

The food and drink options for Mets games keep growing.

EVA KIS
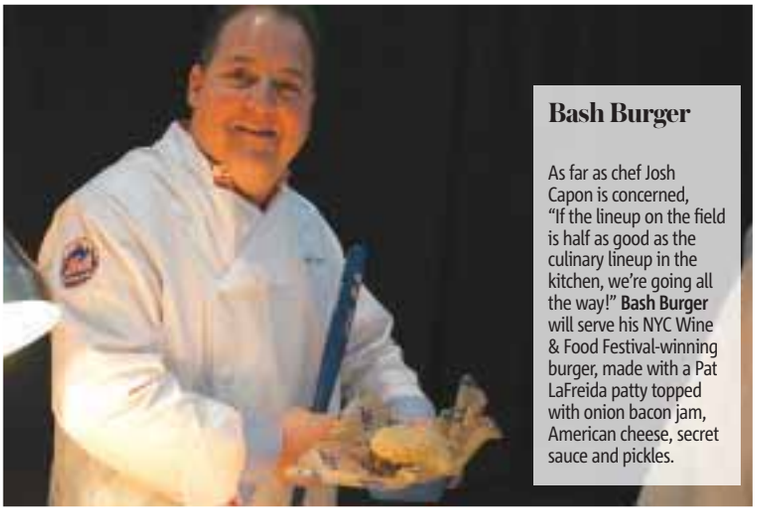
eva.kis@metro.us

It may not feel much like spring, but the opening day for the Mets' 2017 season is less than two weeks away on Monday, April 3. After back-to-back appearances in the postseason, the team will be ready to go for a third — and so will Citi Field. Here's a preview of the new food and drink options coming to the Mets' home:



Bash Burger

As far as chef Josh Capon is concerned, "If the lineup on the field is half as good as the culinary lineup in the kitchen, we're going all the way!" Bash Burger will serve his NYC Wine & Food Festival-winning burger, made with a Pat LaFreida patty topped with onion bacon jam, American cheese, secret sauce and pickles.

DO

Edible cookie dough sensation DŌ will have a stand serving three flavors (chocolate chip, sugar and cake batter, $6-$13). No guarantee that the line will be any shorter than the regular two-hour affair at its Greenwich Village location though. Promenade Club

Nicoletta

Michael White is the latest big-name chef to join the roster at Citi Field. The outpost of his casual restaurant Nicoletta will serve a first for the ballpark, surprisingly: a chicken parmesan sandwich, along with fried pepperoni-mozzarella sticks and stromboli balls. Section 141

Baohaus

Lawyer-turned-food, fashion and entertainment mogul Eddie Huang's East Village shop Baohaus is bringing pillowy Taiwanese-style buns filled with heritage Berkshire pork belly. Promenade Club

Bud Light Landing

In left field on the Excelsior level, Bud Light Landing will be an indoor-outdoor fan lounge with a Budweiser bar and photo ops like an oversized beer can.

New dishes

Some existing restaurants have new items, too.

Two Boots pizzeria created a white pie inspired by the Mets' home borough, the Queen of Queens, topped with Creole chicken, broccoli, cherry tomatoes and fresh garlic.

Catch of the Day has added two great seafood options: Loaded Bayside Fries topped with zesty fried clams and clam chowder fondue, and South Bay Lobster Tacos with citrus slaw and tomatillo-avocado salsa.

David Chang's Fuku has a new, off-the-menu dish: a Mets hard hat overflowing with two chicken sandwiches, chicken fingers, potato wedges and sauces ($42).

The 7 Line Army has a new watering hole just behind the scoreboard: The Jim Bean Bourbon Bar will serve cocktails with a great view of the action.

The oversized mozzarella sticks of Big Mozz have landed, in four flavors and paired with three sauces (4 for $10).

Sweet 16 featuring marquee programs

UCLA meets Kentucky and action at MSG gets underway.

RICH SLATE
@Richslate
sports@metro.us

Friday, at least on paper, features the sexier matchups in the Sweet 16 — highlighted by the dream meeting of No. 2 Kentucky (31-5) vs. No. 3 UCLA (31-4) in Memphis (9:39 p.m., CBS).

The Sweet 16 seems like it is way too early to have these national title contenders squaring off, but you can't complain. Regardless of who loses, you can guarantee that many future NBA players will compete in their final collegiate game in that one. Freshman shooting guard Malik Monk was the SEC Player of the Year so he's due to break out for the Wildcats after quiet performances vs. Northern Kentucky (12 points) and Wichita State (14 points). Bruins senior shooting guard Bryce Alford plays for his father Steve and he's one of the best shooters in the country. Alford had 16 points in UCLA's 79-67 win over Cincinnati in the second round.

Another Friday game features everyone's favorite underdog No. 4 Butler (25-8) vs. No. 1 North Carolina (29-7) in Memphis (7:09 p.m., CBS) in the South region.

College hoops will also take over Madison Square Garden this weekend as No. 3 Baylor (27-7) opposes No. 7 South Carolina (24-10) at 7:39 p.m. (TBS) followed by No. 4 Florida (26-8) vs. No. 8 Wisconsin (27-9) in the East region.

The Bears are known for their early round exits but they staved off USC, 82-78, in the second round. The Gamecocks had never reached a Sweet 16 in program history before now and how they did it no doubt gained them many additional fans. They eliminated Duke, 88-81, in a second round thriller in Greenville, South Carolina. Baylor junior power forward Johnathan Motley has put up double-doubles in both tournament games this season: 19 points and 10 rebounds vs. USC and 15 points and 10 rebounds vs. New Mexico State (both in under 30 minutes of action).

Perhaps nobody has been better in the first two games than South Carolina point guard Sindarius Thornwell, who posted 29 points and 11 rebounds in a first round win over Marquette. That was followed by 24 points, six rebounds and five assists in the game of his life against Duke.

It feels weird to say since they've both become such brand name schools, but not many expected No. 4 Florida (26-8) or No. 8 Wisconsin (27-9) to still be here. The Gators were thought to be overrated from a down SEC, yet they remain alive along with two other teams from their conference (Kentucky and South Carolina). Meanwhile, you should never underestimate the Badgers in March as they dispatched No. 1 overall seed Villanova last weekend, 65-62, in the second round. The over/under for that contest is 131.5 points so don't expect too many easy buckets or pretty basketball.

Senior power forward Nigel Hayes was a big part of Wisconsin's team that made it to the national championship two years ago and he doesn't want his college career to end as he had 16 points and 10 rebounds in the first round win vs. Virginia Tech then 19 points (including the most important basket of the game) and eight rebounds in their fantastic win vs. Villanova. Gators junior small forward Devin Robinson has been immense with 24 points and seven rebounds vs. East Tennessee State then 14 points and 11 rebounds in their blowout of Virginia, 65-39.

Georgetown dumps Thompson III

The college basketball coaching carousel is well underway as Georgetown fired John Thompson III on Thursday. Thompson had been head coach of the Hoyas for the past 13 years and went 278-151 with eight NCAA tournament appearances.

Thompson is the son of legendary Georgetown head coach John Thompson Jr.

NEGATIVE NANCY

You should never "give a hand" to Jason Pierre-Paul, just as you should never tell Nancy Kerrigan to "break a leg." Former figure skater Kristi Yamaguchi was likely just giving her former skating teammate a pep tweet, but she wound up saying the one thing you can't say to Kerrigan.

"So excited for you @NancyAKerrigan! Can't wait to see you grace that ballroom floor, break a leg! #DWTS."

Of course, Kerrigan was famously attacked by the ex-husband of Tonya Harding in 1994, getting her knees whacked with a police baton.

Yamaguchi's message was retweeted over 4,000 times and she hasn't yet taken it down. A rephrasing would be nice.

SHUT UP, DAD

Lavar Ball has become the most notorious sports dad in America, saying that his son Lonzo (currently playing in the NCAA tournament for UCLA) is already better than Golden State Warriors guard Steph Curry and that his boy is more advanced at this stage in his career than Michael Jordan.

The outspoken Lavar stopped by ESPN's "First Take" on Thursday and, obviously, got into it with fellow loudmouth Stephen A. Smith.

"I'm gonna build this empire [with my sons] and guess what? Folks don't like that," Lavar told Smith regarding his haters.

Daddy Ball also said he was ready to throw down with anyone who stepped in his way and has been lifting weights in preparation of potential fisticuffs.

The WWE needs to sign this guy in time for WrestleMania. What's more hateable than a loudmouth, overbearing dad at a sporting event?

Aries Your ability to help others and bring about change will put you in a good position when you need help. Don't let anyone limit your time with unnecessary demands.

Taurus Don't feel pressured to spend money extravagantly just to keep up with your peers. Emotional matters will escalate if you aren't clear about your feelings and desires.

Gemini Use your intelligence to get your way. Adding pressure to a stressful situation will backfire, but offering realistic solutions will turn you into a hero.

Cancer You'll have some interesting ideas, but before you move forward, put a plan in place that will help you avoid failure. Caution and hard work will be necessary.

Leo Talks will lead to positive change and greater opportunity. Team up with someone who is like-minded and heading down a similar path.

Virgo Concentrate on getting things done. Less talk and more action will help you bypass criticism and complaints. Don't give in to someone trying to pressure or bully you.

Libra Bring about positive change that will make a loved one happy. Your ability to express yourself openly and find innovative solutions to problems will make you a hero.

Scorpio Stay calm even if everyone around you is unpredictable. Your patience will be what saves the day. Trust in your intuition and your ability to see all sides of a situation.

Sagittarius You will improve the status quo if you discuss your intentions openly and proceed with your plans. Trust your instincts and follow through with your decisions.

Capricorn Don't reconnect with someone who was a bad influence in the past. Problems will arise if you overspend, indulge or take a backward step.

Aquarius Negotiate and sign contracts with ease. If someone doesn't like what you have to offer, don't worry; an alternate offer will come your way. Time is on your side.

Pisces Participate in events that encourage new connections. Working alongside individuals who have similar concerns will help you reach your goal faster. EUGENIA LAST
